

7-1-2012

They Turn Their Eyes Away

Lawrence Matsuda

Follow this and additional works at: <http://digitalcommons.law.seattleu.edu/sjsj>

Recommended Citation

Matsuda, Lawrence (2012) "They Turn Their Eyes Away," Seattle Journal for Social Justice: Vol. 11: Iss. 1, Article 15.
Available at: <http://digitalcommons.law.seattleu.edu/sjsj/vol11/iss1/15>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Student Publications and Programs at Seattle University School of Law Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Seattle Journal for Social Justice by an authorized administrator of Seattle University School of Law Digital Commons.

They Turn Their Eyes Away

Lawrence Matsuda, poet

Minidoka barbed wire
snags hope like tumbleweed.
One thousand miles away
Shoichi Okamoto, at Tule Lake California*
twists and falls, a bullet in his head,
cost of disbelief of a guard.
The soldier walks free,
fined a dollar for “unauthorized use
of government property”.
Wind blows alkaline dust
through the tarpaper barrack.
Bachan prays for freedom,
strikes her singing bowl.
Minidoka crumbles in her dreams
when black rain splatters Hiroshima and sunlight sparkles silver through thin barrack doors.
Freedom will not be open arms
and welcome banners.
Red rose petal showers
reserved for real Americans.
We are the vanquished foe
walking thorough the victor’s lair, gauntlet of 1000 eyes.
Anxious to pass unnoticed
in our yellow skin,

we will turn away from Remember Pearl Harbor remarks.
Mushroom clouds inhabit
the irises of our eyes.