From the Dean

Dear Colleagues,

Last week, I accidentally omitted Paula Lustbader's name from the list of individuals who have worked closely with the advancement office in helping bring in recent major gifts. This is particularly ironic in that the continued support of the ARC Program by the anonymous donor is due in great part to Paula's outstanding work. She has been a tireless and effective partner and supporter, teaching and mentoring the ARC Scholars; ensuring that they provide thank you notes to the anonymous donor; writing her own notes; apprising us when ARC Scholars should be featured because of their accomplishments, etc., and Susan Ahearn and I want to publicly thank Paula for her efforts.

I also want to acknowledge the work of Leann Wagele in planning last week's Women's Law Caucus Luncheon, at which we gave Chief Justice Barbara Madsen the Woman of the Year Award. The venue was beautiful, the program was seamless, and Justice Madsen was so touched that she was literally at a loss for words. Once she was able to speak, Justice Madsen described what a special place SU School of Law is and how much she and others appreciate our work in the local legal community. I've heard rave reviews from the attendees, many of whom are leaders in our profession, so thank you to Leann and her event planning staff for helping us to present the school and the work that we do in such a favorable light.

Best,

Annette
