Dear Faculty and Staff Colleagues –

It is hard to believe that the end of the first week in February is upon us. Seattle U Law kicked off the new year with a strong showing at the AALS Annual Meeting in San Diego last month. Our faculty and administrators were prominently featured as panelists, presenters, and newly elected section leaders. Additionally, we hosted a lively Seattle-themed reception that was so well attended that it flowed out into the hallway. Our reception allowed us to highlight Seattle U Law's recent successes in faculty hiring and impactful scholarship to our national colleagues.

Many thanks to everyone involved in our Diversity Week programming late last month. Many of our faculty and staff colleagues participated in or attended the many events, including the Diversity Week Reception on Tuesday, January 24th, which was followed by Zabrina Jenkins, Executive Vice President & General Counsel of Starbucks,

Upcoming Notable Events

The Washington Supreme Court holds oral arguments at Seattle U Law, February 22nd and 23rd.

Jeff Farrah, Executive Director of the Autonomous Vehicle Industry Association (AVIA) will be the February Luminary in Law on the 28th at 4:30 (room TBA). Professor Dorothy Roberts will be a Luminary in Law as our first Luminaries in Law guest of the spring semester.

I was pleased, but not surprised, that four out of six attorneys named by the Puget Sound Business Journal as the Next Gen in Law are Seattle U Law graduates. Congratulations to Rachel Bender '15, Desirée Good '15, Carrie Mount '19, and David Papiez '18, who were recognized as “attorneys leading their profession into the future.”

We have much good news to celebrate below. Congratulations to the many of you who published new scholarship, were featured prominently in the media or in conferences and symposia, or otherwise brought positive attention to our law school community. I look forward to continued celebration of the law school's good news items throughout the Spring semester.

The Korematsu Center joined the Fair Housing Center of Washington as amici before the Washington State Supreme Court in State of Washington v. City of Sunnyside, et al., in a case brought by the Wing Luke Civil Rights Unit of the Washington State Attorney General's Office that challenges Sunnyside's Crime Free Rental Housing Program. The amicus brief provides additional doctrinal and empirical support for proper analysis of the State's claims under the disparate impact provisions of the Washington Law Against Discrimination.

Prof. Jack Kirkwood submitted the final version of his article, "Reforming the Robinson-Patman Act," to the CPI Antitrust Chronicles. He also submitted the final version of his chapter, "Predation and Discrimination," to the editor of the Handbook on Abuse of Dominance and Monopolization.

Assistant Dirs. Jessica Levin and Melissa Lee filed an amicus brief in the Washington State Supreme Court in State v. Reynolds, which presents the question of whether a predicate strike offense committed under the age of 18 can be the basis for a mandatory life without parole sentence under Washington's three strikes law. The amicus brief provided additional state constitutional analysis as well as descriptive statistics regarding the extreme race disproportionality of those sentenced to die in prison based on predicate crimes committed as children. Korematsu Center partners at ACLU-Washington, King County Department of Public Defense, TeamChild, Washington Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers, and Washington Defender Association joined the Korematsu Center as amici.

Assistant Dirs. Melissa Lee and Jessica Levin filed an amicus brief in the Washington State Court of Appeals in Personal Restraint of Keonte Smith, providing empirical studies on adultification of Black children and arguing for explicit consideration of adultification bias when juvenile courts decline jurisdiction of children to adult court for prosecution, as well as during sentencing. PRESENTATIONS and TESTIMONY

Vice Dean Deborah Ahrens presented on the AALS Hot Topic program Assessing the Impact of President Biden's Marijuana Actions.

Prof. Thomas Antkowiak presented on November 29th, via Zoom, on the right to equality in the Inter-American System to African international human rights judges and commissioners. The judicial colloquium took place in Nigeria and was organized by the Centre for Human Rights of the University of Pretoria, South Africa.

Assoc. Dean Steven Bender gave a presentation at YouTube headquarters in San Bruno, California, at its Racial Justice and Human Rights Summit for its executives and team leaders on Latinx stereotypes and hate speech.

Assoc. Dean Steven Bender was a panelist at the AALS conference in the Civil Rights Section program, Integrating Critical Pedagogies to Fulfill the Promise of Revised Standard 303.

Prof. Bob Boruchowitz spoke at a webinar panel on January 10 for the ABA Section of Civil Rights and Social Justice on Public Defender Independence. There were about 180 attendees.

Prof. Robert Chang was a panelist for the AALS workshop, Pre-tenured Law School Teachers of Color, Session One: On Being an Other in the Classroom, Law School, and University.

Prof. Maggie Chon presented on the pending Supreme Court case, Andy Warhol Foundation for the Visual Arts v. Goldsmith, at the November Seattle IP Inn of Court meeting, along with several other team members (including Seattle University student Lynisha Batson, and alums Maili Barber and Anabel Manaloor).

Vice Dean Designate Brooke Coleman moderated a panel, Civil Procedure Co-Sponsored by Creditors' & Debtors' Rights, Litigation, and Remedies - What's In, What's Out: How to Teach Civil Procedure in an Increasingly Crowded conference for law review editors hosted by The American Society for Legal Writers on March 26, 2023.

Curriculum session, at the AALS conference in January. Vice Dean Coleman also was a panelist for New Law Professors - Beginnings, Middles, and Endings: Planning Your Classes, Your Courses, and Your Career session at the AALS conference in January.

Profs. Janet Dickson, Mimi Samuel, and Katy Boling planned and successfully hosted a small virtual conference on December 10 as part of the Legal Writing Institute's One-Day Workshops. Over 40 people attended the virtual conference.

Prof. Gillian Dutton participated in a worldwide Global Alliance for Justice Education conference in South Africa in December. She presented about the law school's meaningful experiences with the Transitional Justice Legal Exchange course we offer in partnership with Université Moulay Ismail. The class includes a service project in which Moroccan students interview participants in that country's successful truth, justice, and reconciliation process. American students interview people who have been impacted by racial injustice, particularly police officer violence against Black and brown communities.

Prof. Dutton also testified in favor of Washington State Senate Bill 5304 requiring Washington State Department of Social and Health Services (DSHS) to reinstate its testing of interpreters, translators, and bilingual staff used by the department to comply with the Reyes Consent Decree. Prof. Dutton and her colleagues at Evergreen Legal Services negotiated the consent decree to resolve a class action lawsuit against the state for failure to provide language access to Limited English Proficient residents. The lawsuit alleged a claim of discrimination based on national origin under Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Prof. Dutton also presented on Monday, December 12 on the topic of "Virtual Collaborations for Social Justice Across Culture and Language; Tools for the Next Generation" at the Global Alliance For Justice Education conference at the University of Stellenbosch in South Africa. She also presented on Tools for Representation: How to Work with Interpreters; Trauma Informed Lawyering; and Cultural Humility as part of a American Immigration Lawyers Association (AILA) webinar on December 5, 2022. Finally, Prof. Dutton presented on Representing Diverse Clients with Cultural Competence and Compassion as part of a Northwest Health Law Advocates (NoHLA) webinar entitled "Health Care Access: How Are the Courts Shaping Our Future?" on October 21, 2022.

On January 27th, the students of the Workers Rights Clinic, under the guidance of Prof. Elizabeth Ford, testified before the Labor and Workplace Standards Committee of the Washington Legislature in favor of HB 1217. That bill will require the Department of Labor and Industries to collect interest on all meritorious claims of wage theft and will require the creation of a working group to explore other avenues to ensure workers are made whole from wage theft, including the possibility of a Wage Recovery Fund. Here is the link to the actual testimony.

Assoc. Dean Sital Kalantry moderated a Human Rights Pedagogy Section and spoke in a panel for the South Asian Law Section on how we can use Indian constitutional doctrine in American courts at the AALS Conference.

Prof. Jack Kirkwood moderated the antitrust section panel at AALS. Herb Hovenkamp (Penn and the most cited scholar in antitrust law) called it an “important panel.” Tom Morgan (former dean at Emory) said it was the best panel he had heard at the conference. The topic was New Threats to Antitrust Enforcement and the speakers were Dick Pierce (GW), Bill Kovacic (GW and former chair of the FTC), John Newman (Miami and current Deputy Director at the FTC), and Christine Bartholomew (Buffalo).

Assistant Director Jessica Levin served as a facilitator at the Second Look Summit on January 6, organized by the Seattle Clemency Project and co-hosted by Seattle U and Gonzaga law schools. The summit brought together key stakeholders in Washington’s criminal legal system, including many people who had lived through long-term incarceration, to reflect on the changes in the law that have created pathways for resentencing at the trial court, and to develop best-practices for second-look casework.

Prof. Dean Spade gave a lecture on “Organizing Transformative Justice Responses to Gender-based Violence and Campus Sexual Violence.” Organizing Transformative Justice Responses to Gender-based Violence and Campus Sexual Violence - YouTube

Dean Tony Varona, as a selection committee chair, presented with AALS President Chemerinsky (UC Berkeley Dean) to Kevin Johnson (UC Davis Dean) the inaugural Olivas Award at a plenary AALS Awards Session. This was the main award at the Session.
