

Seattle Journal for Social Justice

Volume 7 | Issue 2

Article 14

May 2008

Untitled

Whitney Allen

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.law.seattleu.edu/sjsj>

Recommended Citation

Allen, Whitney (2008) "Untitled," Seattle Journal for Social Justice: Vol. 7 : Iss. 2 , Article 14.

Available at: <https://digitalcommons.law.seattleu.edu/sjsj/vol7/iss2/14>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Student Publications and Programs at Seattle University School of Law Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Seattle Journal for Social Justice by an authorized editor of Seattle University School of Law Digital Commons. For more information, please contact coteconor@seattleu.edu.

Untitled

Whitney Allen

No more excuses. No more, “I’m sorry it’s just” No more. You just don’t get it. The truth of the matter is I just don’t get it myself—I wish I did, but I don’t. I don’t know why I am so messed up. I don’t know why I have to be so mean. I can’t explain the reason or even know if there is a real reason for my attitude. I’m not sure if there is something really wrong with me or if I was just brainwashed into believing there is something wrong with me when they took me from my mom.

When I cry and someone else asks me what’s wrong, a majority of the time I just make something up because I really don’t have a clue as to why I am crying or where the tears came from in the first place. I don’t know why I have never been okay in my whole life, not even once. I don’t get how I know I need to talk and sometimes I want to talk but never know what about or how to even start. I don’t understand how it always feels like something’s missing. I can’t understand how everyone is fine or finds a way to be okay except me. I don’t know how I just somehow fell apart.

I don’t know how to make something of myself. Sometimes when I hear myself talk, I hear myself saying a lot of good things, but the reality is all I’ve amounted to is just one big mess. I’m not even sure I know why I hurt and why I was even mad in the first place. Thought and played with death, but just didn’t have the heart. What if heaven and hell are indeed real. I can’t live and go through hell and then die and go to hell. Sometimes I am sure but the rest of time I am clueless and lost.

I smoke weed day in and day out, blunt after blunt just so I won’t cry. My whole life from the age I can remember until yesterday plays in my mental theater, and there’s no bathroom breaks. I always feel scared inside, and sometimes I try to trick myself into believing I don’t care, but I really do. I don't get how I always without fail manage to mess everything up. You know with people you never can be sure, so I can never figure out when to trust and not lie. I can't recall ever feeling apart or as if I belong.

When I was a little kid it was just as bad as now—always feeling aware and feeling like I got to do something and always in the end just making a big mess of things. Closed out of the world and people. I don't think I ever actually felt loved without any threat about it—not even with my family. I'm not sure if the only reason I close myself in is that all my life I was closed out of it. I am just so scared, and that's the way I prefer to be.

Everything is a mess, and I can't fix it.