About the Authors
ALONSO CANO

Alonso Cano is a 2017 JD candidate at Seattle University School of Law, where he serves as an Article Editor for the Seattle Journal for Social Justice. He was born in Durango, Mexico and raised in Sparks, Nevada, where he earned a BA in Criminal Justice from the University of Nevada, Reno.

During law school, Alonso worked as a legal extern for the Northwest Justice Project in 2015, where he developed a passion for public interest law. In 2016, he served as an Equal Justice Works AmeriCorps JD intern with Kids in Need of Defense (KIND), where he combined his passion for public interest law with the important work of defending unaccompanied immigrant children in removal proceedings. Additionally, Alonso is a proud member of the Latinx Law Student Association (L.L.S.A.).

Alonso is honored to be featured in this publication and would like to thank all of his colleagues who edited his article. Most importantly, he would like to thank his wife and family for their unconditional support, without whom none of his achievements would be possible.

ANDREW R. FALK

Andrew Falk is a Senior Fellow with the Sagamore Institute. His research areas include international environmental and energy law and domestic criminal justice reform. He researches and writes regularly on environmental and energy issues, such as the promise of solar energy in Africa and the benefits of secure property rights to protect the environment. He has studied Indiana’s criminal code reforms and teaches post-college classes at an Indiana prison.

Following law school, Andrew served as a judicial clerk to the Honorable Kenneth L. Ryskamp, Federal District Judge, Southern District of Florida, and to the Honorable Brent E. Dickson of the Supreme Court of Indiana.
Before joining the Sagamore Institute, Andrew practiced business and environmental law with the Indianapolis firm Kroger, Gardis and Regas.
While at the firm, Andrew was introduced to the world of environmental law while working on a large PCB contamination case, and he has remained passionate about environmental issues since that time. He left the firm to join the Indiana Office of the Attorney General and practiced in Criminal Appeals, arguing multiple cases before the Indiana Court of Appeals and Indiana Supreme Court. He also worked for the Office of Assistant Chief Counsel, U.S. Customs and Border Protection, where he assisted with issues as diverse as collecting duties from importers of counterfeit goods to environmental cleanups at Border Patrol stations.
Andrew was born and raised in the Midwest, living in Iowa and Kansas before moving to Indiana. He now lives in Indianapolis with his wife and four children. In his free time, he enjoys spending time with his family, reading, and managing his fantasy football teams.

CHRISTOPHER FOURNIER
Christopher Fournier has a degree in political science from Pacific Lutheran University and currently is a JD candidate at Seattle University School of Law where he is a senior staff editor for the Seattle Journal of Social Justice. He is interested in estate planning and employment law.
Chris is an active member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints where he volunteers as a Sunday school teacher.

NIKOS KOUTRAS
Nikos Koutras is a Political Science graduate. He holds a Masters degree by research and dissertation on Science of Information (Ionian University) and a Doctoral degree by research in Political Science. He currently works on a second PhD thesis by publication in Intellectual Property Law at Macquarie Law School in Australia. He is recipient of full scholarship and since 2014 he has been teaching Intellectual Property Law in undergraduate and postgraduate level at Macquarie Law School. He has been awarded three different research grants and already published three books up to date. He worked as research assistant at the Department of Law, Business and Taxation of Monash University and currently acts as Assistant Editor for the International Journal of Technology Policy and Law. He is the Vice-head of the research group Information: History, Regulation and Culture (http://www.ihrc.gr). He also works as research fellow for the Geolab Institute (http://geolab institute.org).

PATRICK D. MURPHREE

Patrick D. Murphree earned his Ph.D. from Indiana University, Bloomington and is completing the final year of his J.D. at Loyola University New Orleans College of Law. While at law school, he served as the Managing Editor for Substance and Citation of the Loyola Law Review, in which he published a casenote addressing housing discrimination and a comment defending disarmament of domestic abusers. As a part-time student, Patrick spent his evenings teaching LSAT, GRE, and GMAT test preparation courses. Through internships with the Southern Poverty Law Center and the New Orleans Workers Center for Racial Justice, the last as an Ella Baker Intern with the Center for Constitutional Rights, Patrick gained exposure to the variety of legal needs facing the people of New Orleans. In addition, he has provided legal research support to clinical faculty at the Gillis Long Poverty Law Center in areas of disaster recovery, housing rights, felon disenfranchisement, disability law, and education law. After law school, Patrick will clerk for Judge Elizabeth Erny Foote of the Western District of Louisiana before returning to New Orleans to continue working for social justice.
CHRISTINA NGUYEN

Christina Nguyen is a 2017 JD candidate at Seattle University School of Law. She earned her BA in Criminal Justice with a minor in Legal Studies at Saint Martin’s University, located in Lacey, WA. Christina was born and raised on the island of Oahu, and hopes to return there someday to be closer to her family.

She has previously worked as a summer intern for Pfau Cochran Vertetis Amala PLLC and currently works as a legal clerk for Aoki Law PLLC. As a law student, Christina has served as treasurer of the Asian Pacific Islander Law Student Association, secretary of the OUTLaws, member of the SBA Budget Committee, and an Executive Editor for the Seattle Journal for Social Justice (SJSJ). She is also a research assistant to Professor Sara Rankin and a member of SALT’s Student Advisory Council (SSAC) pilot program. Outside of law school, Christina enjoys watching Korean variety shows and Twitch streamers. She would like to thank SJSJ for featuring her in this publication, and she would also like to thank her family, friends, professors, and others who have supported her in both law school and her life.

MIYOKO PETTIT-TOLEDO

Miyoko Pettit-Toledo graduated summa cum laude from the University of Hawai‘i, William S. Richardson School of Law and joined the Hawaii State Bar in 2015. Her undergraduate studies at Harvard University and her recent reconciliation work with Professor Eric Yamamoto revealed how telling silenced stories is sometimes a first step to healing open wounds. For her commitment to social justice, in 2013, Miyoko was named the inaugural Korematsu Scholar Advocate. In 2014, she received the Sam L. Cohen Summer Fellowship for International Human Rights and interned in the Trial Chamber of the Special Tribunal for Lebanon (The Hague, Netherlands). From 2015 to 2016, she served as a law clerk for Associate Justice Richard W. Pollack of the Hawaii Supreme Court. She is currently a term law clerk for Senior Judge Susan Oki Mollway of the U.S. District Court for the District of Hawaii.

SARAH SHEFFIELD

Sarah Sheffield graduated from the University of Hawai‘i, William S. Richardson School of Law. She worked as a law student Scholar Advocate with Professor Yamamoto. Sarah joined the Hawai‘i State Bar in 2015 and is currently serving a two year clerkship with Associate Justice Paula A. Nakayama of the Hawai‘i Supreme Court.

ERIC K. YAMAMOTO

Eric K. Yamamoto is the Fred T. Korematsu Professor of Law and Social Justice at the William S. Richardson School of Law, University of Hawai‘i. He is nationally and internationally recognized for his teaching, legal work and scholarship on civil procedure as well as civil and human rights and social justice, with an emphasis on reconciliation initiatives and redress for historic injustice. He served as legal team counsel to Fred Korematsu in the coram nobis reopening of his World War II Japanese American internment challenge; as class action counsel to Native Hawaiian homelands beneficiaries ($600 million reparations settlement); as procedure counsel on the human rights class action by Filipino victims of torture, murder and disappearances against the former Marcos regime; and as reparations counsel on the African American reparations suit for the 1921 Tulsa race riot. His reconciliation work includes initiatives involving the United Church of Christ and Native Hawaiians; indigenous Ainu claims to land and cultural resurrection in Japan; the Korean World War II military sex slaves; and the Jeju, South Korea “Peacetime” Tragedy.