About the Authors

Liat Ben-Moshe

Liat Ben-Moshe is an activist-scholar-educator-researcher working at the intersection of incarceration, decarceration, abolition and disability/madness. Her work aims to expand what counts as incarceration to include all carceral locales (including residential institutions for people with intellectual disabilities, psych facilities and prisons/jails) and to connect deinstitutionalization, disability and mad movements to prison abolition activism through an intersectional lens.

Victoria Kroeger

Victoria Kroeger is a student at Seattle University School of Law. She was born in Seattle, WA and raised in Kent, WA by her in a multiracial and multigenerational family. Victoria graduated from Northeastern University in 2017 with a Bachelor's in Behavioral Neuroscience and a minor in Women's, Gender, and Sexuality Studies. In law school, Victoria served as the Vice President of the Asian Pacific Islander Law Student Association and Executive Editor of the Seattle Journal for Social Justice. As a student, Victoria represented and supported workers with the Unemployment Law Project, the Seattle University Workers' Rights Clinic, and the Drivers Union. She will earn her law degree in May 2023. Victoria plans to continue serving her community as a plaintiffs' attorney in the Puget Sound area, and working with community organizations to improve working conditions for domestic workers and agricultural workers in Washington.

Zachary R.M. Outzen

Zachary R.M. Outzen is a public interest attorney at a veterans' legal aid nonprofit. He graduated from William & Mary Law School with a J.D. in 2022 (Concentration in Public Interest & Social Justice). While in law school, he interned at the Richmond Public Defender's Office, where he represented defendants charged with criminal misdemeanors, and at Legal Services of Northern California, where he assisted tenants facing eviction and litigated on behalf of HMO-Medicaid recipients at administrative hearings. He is a proud second-generation Turkish immigrant and family member to six U.S. Army veterans.

Mr. Outzen would like to thank Professors Cynthia Ward, Caleb Stone, and Vivian Hamilton of William & Mary Law School for their guidance in preparing this Article. He would also like to thank the participants of the William & Mary Center for Racial & Social Justice's Annual Graduate Research Symposium for their invaluable feedback on this Article.

MADDISON STORY

Maddison Story is a 2023 J.D. Candidate at Seattle University School of Law. Prior to law school, Maddison earned her B.A. in Sociology and Law, Societies, and Justice from the University of Washington. Prior to law school, Maddison worked in a variety of roles supporting young people releasing from incarceration. After law school, Maddison plans to pursue a career in public defense.

ELIZABETH N. JONES

NACHMAN N. GUTOWSKI

Nachman N. Gutowski is an Assistant Professor of Academic Success and Bar Preparation at St. Thomas University, Benjamin L. Crump College of Law. Before entering academia in 2020, he spent nearly a decade in the corporate bar preparation world. Despite having successfully passed multiple Bar Examinations, Professor Gutowski is an outspoken advocate for change in the licensure requirements of new attorneys. His scholarship focuses on discrimination, equity, and educational accreditation. He would like to thank the following people for their contributions to this article: I first express gratitude and love to my brilliant, kind, patient, and always-supportive wife, Yanina Lang Gutowski. Without you, nothing I do is possible. I appreciate your countless edits, revisions, and fantastic contributions to our work. To Baruch and Shemaya, thank you for sharing your always insightful notes. Gracias Rosa and Maiky. Special thank you to Dean Todd J. Clark for pushing me to write, and to everyone who inspired and supported this effort. Recognition is due to my research assistant Kayla S. Bell, STU ’24 for your help sorting through, organizing, and triple-checking the mountain of pass rate data. Any errors are undoubtably my own.
